Au Revoir France I want to tell you that I've had some truly happy moments in France and some of them I owe to WorldAware. Two years ago I began to go to the French Cours to work on my French. To have real conversations and not the 'dukkie' conversations I had been having in my English classes. I decided to sign up for an intensive course. I took that course four times and I loved it so much I started with one more intensive course. That was the first time I met those wonderful teachers. They took me under their wings and helped me start a blog and then they recommended WorldAware to me. I spent some of my happiest moments in France with them and that is why I am here. To say au revoir and good luck. Marie-Claire I am a highly confident, extrovert, outgoing and emotionally strong woman. I am passionate about travelling, meeting new people, making friends and working to do something more to help others. What I want in life is to meet new people, experience new cultures and make memories. But I have a fear of going into unknown places alone. One of the tools I use in my professional life is social media, but one of my biggest challenges is that I hate it. It takes an enormous amount of courage to be on my social media sites, to interact with new people and to say hello. I want to learn how
