Extract: Download the program Publish: Compress the file Thanks, I've been looking for something like this for a while! A: @Ziggie, I have some of the same problems with your script that I just set up, but I have found an easy fix. There is a much more advanced way, but it's more advanced. Also, I only had to run one command. There's a WordPress plugin called "Generate and Encode JSON WordPress Plugin", and it will allow you to insert values into any WordPress database column as a JSON object. So, for example, you could insert a value into the postmeta table as: $json = '[{"id":"23","meta":"test"}]'; wpdb->insert('postmeta', $json, array('meta' => 'test')); Or, if you want to insert the same value into multiple columns of the same table, you can use the "replace_sql()" function to insert, and then use the function "get_post_meta()" to pull values from that column. More information on Generate and
